TUNIS SHEEP AT THE FAIR.

Remnant of a Once Famous Breed From Africa.

The only flock of Tunis sheep exhibited at the World's fair was that of Charles Rountree of Crawfordsville, Ind. The Tunis type of sheep is a rare breed and the flock which was exhibited is descended directly from two animals that were brought to this country from Africa in 1799 by General William Eaton, who was at that time United States consul to Tunis.

He purchased them from the Bey of Tunis, but only one ram and one ewe survived the voyage to this country. This pair, Caramelli and Selnin, were placed under the care of Judge Richard Peters, a noted sheep breeder, near Philadelphia, and a flock of Tunis sheep was raised.

These were all sent south to North and South Carolina, Virginia and Georgia, where they were successfully bred until the beginning of the Civil war. The breed was then entirely lost until a small flock was discovered in the swamps of South Carolina in 1890, by Maynard H. Springer of Columbia. The half dozen were caught and the breed was again started.

The flock exhibited at the World's fair are the progeny of this remnant of the flock of Tunis sheep that was lost sight of for 50 years.

The most powerful lighthouse in America will soon be in operation on Lennard island, on the west coast of Vancouver island. It will have 750,000 candle power, and be visible for 25 miles.

Work on the government building at the Lewis and Clark fair is progressing rapidly, and the building will be completed by April 1.

There is a sudden and almost inexplicable slump in the price of high-grade race horses.
